

I did not serve in Vietnam

How do these yahoos get away with it for so long? Why do they not only embellish their military service but even make it up when they have none? Fabricate it.

The clown in Connecticut (Democrat) who has for years made claims about service in Vietnam and/or allowed representations to stand when made, and also claimed he was on the Harvard rowing team when he was not, thought he could pull it off when he ran for U.S. Senate?

Connecticut voters have chosen Chris Dodd for years so they're not very discriminating in their choice of Senator. And, of course, before Chris Dodd, they chose his father, Thomas Dodd, twice before he was censured in 1967 for converting campaign money to personal use.

Thomas Dodd joined the infamous Wisconsin senator, Joseph McCarthy (Ann Coulter's political hero), as being the only senators ever censured.

Even Chris Dodd's drinking buddy, Teddy Kennedy voted with the majority 92-5 vote to censure the elder Dodd. Young Dodd's behavior in Washington D.C. bars is legend. He and Teddy never met a tavern they didn't want to close. Or to leave.

Connecticut's other senator is Joe Lieberman, who is a ... let's see, today is Tuesday .. so he is an Independent. Elected as a Democrat but rejected by Democratic voters in the '08 primary, he supported John McCain and nearly became his running mate after having been Al Gore's running mate in '00, Lieberman is the Senate's chameleon. And as trustworthy as a second is long.

In between Dodds, Connecticut elected Lowell Weicker to the Senate. Weicker was a Republican who became an Independent, now swings Democratic and serves on the Board of Directors of World Wrestling Entertainment. The WWE.

Now, the odds-on favorite to win the election to succeed Chris Dodd in the Senate has been exposed as a fraud. For years, he has told stories about the treatment he received when he returned from Vietnam and used words like, "when I served in Vietnam." But, unless there's a small town called "Vietnam" near Concord, the joker never served there. He begged, borrowed and stole five draft deferments, finagled his way into the Marine Corps Reserves to avoid Vietnam, and still portrayed himself as a war hero. He may still win.

Slaughterhouse Sue

Part of the oath of office for a Wyoming legislator is to uphold the Constitution of the State of Wyoming. A violation of that oath should lead to removal from office. Sue Wallis knowingly and deliberately violated her oath of office by not only voting on a "measure" she had a private (and pecuniary) personal interest in but for such a bill she also sponsored, a major violator. She has violated W.S. § 9-13-106 as well. Sue Wallis is not fit to serve in the Wyoming House of Representatives and should be removed.
