Mattel apologized to China?

Okay, let's see if we got this right.

Chinese manufacturers have flooded the U.S. market with toys dipped in lead-based paint which is banned in our country and produced toys with removable magnets that can be then swallowed.

Oh, now I see why Mattel apologized.

They should have been more specific when they signed the contract to have Barbie and Ken dolls made over there with thirty-six cents an hour wages. They should have told the Chinese factory and the Chinese government, "We would be very pleased if you do not use lead-based paint on Barbie and her accessories. Why? Well, you see, that paint is banned in the U.S. and has been for many years. Perhaps that is why you got such a good deal on the paint when you bought it."

"Oh. We have another law in our country. Toys designed, marketed and sold for children under 3 cannot have parts that are "chokable." That is a word we use to mean that little children tend to put small pieces into their mouths and will choke on them unless caught in time."

"We are so sorry to trouble you. It must be very difficult to make safe toys at thirty-six cents an hour. Please forgive us."

Barrasso still voting the same as Enzi

At least Jarrin' John doesn't need an eraser on his pencil. He never has to change his answer. He just looks across the Senate and gets his cue from Mike Enzi.

The pattern has been established. John Barrasso will vote exactly as Mike Enzi does through next year's election.

As has been shown on these pages previously, Barrasso follows Enzi's lead no matter what.

The State/Foreign Operations Appropriations Act, FY2008 passed the Senate 81-12, with 7 members not voting. The description was "The Senate passed this measure that would provide $34 billion to fund foreign aid and U.S. diplomacy for the upcoming fiscal year."

Sen. Michael Enzi voted NO. Sen. John Barrasso voted NO.

One sixth (1/6) of the negative votes were cast by the two Wyoming senators. Oh, we should be so proud.

Of the seven members not voting, five are seeking the presidential nomination - McCain, Dodd, Biden, Clinton and Obama. One, Larry Craig, is a tad uncomfortable in D.C. right now. Don't know why Blanche Lincoln didn't show.

The Transportation / HUD Appropriations Act, FY2008 passed the Senate 88-7, with five not voting. This Bill's description was: "The Senate voted to approve $104.6 billion to fund programs at the Department of Transportation and Housing and Urban Development." Got any idea where this is headed?

Bingo! Sen. Michael Enzi voted NO. Sen. John Barrasso voted NO.

Two of the seven negative votes came from Wyoming's delegation. Is it possible that one day the vote will be like 92-2, with six not voting and the two NO votes will be Enzi and Barrasso?

Not voting on this baby were McCain, Boxer, Craig, Clinton and Dodd. A bit of pattern developing here also.

Wyoming should have had a choice about filling Sen. Craig Thomas' vacancy. And of saving the federal treasury the money going to John Barrasso to mirror, or parrot, everything Mike Enzi says or does.

Is there a possibility that Barrasso's vote might ever be different from Enzi's? A remote chance. You know what they say about Mike stopping too fast and John breaking his nose, don't you? And, John. We know you've proposed to your friend. Give it a rest, will ya? Thank you.
